that Dan Mrs. Morris al-ways said-and hated farm work.

AN MORRIS had run away from his home on the farm and none of the family had heard a word concerning him in the three years followed. was the youngest of three children — "her baby," as old

"If brother Jim likes it, let him do it," he had told the family defiantly. "I'm going to some blg city where a fellow has some chance to see life and make his fortune. I'm through with having all day long in the seorching sun, milking cows and feeding hogs, and then buying to sit in the dark on the porch tistening to nothing but frogs and katydids until you have to go to bed if you want to get up in time to do it all over again next day. I'm through, I tell you!

The family had tried to reason with Dan, but it was of no use. One morning they found him gone, leaving buly the briefest note of good-by to his mother. And now the third Christmas since his going had come and the famly liself was going in to the big city to spend holidays with Julia, who had married and lived there.

Ordinarily Julia and her husband. with little Bobbie, came out to the farm visiting the old folks and brother Jim at Christmas, but this year Julia had a new baby, source four months old, and hadn't felt equal to the trip. So father and sweet-faced mother Morris-their hair already white and with the years' anxiety for their missing Dan reflected in wrinkled faces-packed up all sorts of home-made catables in baskets and had sun-burned brother Jim take them for the first time to the big city.

It was a bewildering adventure fothose simple souls; each incident of the journey and novel sight after arrival was a never-to-be forgotten expertence. Fred. Julia's brisk and hearty husband, wetcomed them at the station and thellled them with a ride out to their daughter's apartment on the elevated rallway. It was Claus, and I live at 5601 Byrne street," a Joyous reunion, but—as mother said, with a sudden break in her voice-"if can't be as if my baby, our Dan, were there with us too," "There, there, mother," said father Morris, patting her quivering shoulder onsolingly. "You mustn't think about his head in perfunctory weariness, Dan just now, He'll return to us some day when he's become rich and famous. Just look here, Julia-and you Fred!-all the mouth-watering stuff that Ma's brought you from the father. farm. Home-churned, uncolored butter rolls those are! It was pathetically absurb, that barren little hope of the bereaved old mother, but none of them even let her see them smile at it. The afternoon before Christmas Julia persuaded her husband, to take tittle Bobbie downtown so that he could not surprise her trimming the tree. Brother Jim and the old folks vent along.

"Oh see, daddie! A horse that rocks, with a mane and bridle and ever'thing!.... And oh, grandma! lookit' lookit! There's a real live Santa Claus talking to those other little boys and girls!"

It was indeed. The big store had bired a rather st bby-looking young man that week, w .o for $15 was supposed to sit at the door of an imitation snow house and solemnly encourage visiting youngsters to tell him their fondest wants in the line of presents. Little Bobble was impatiently waiting in line, holding fast with one chubby fist to his father's hand, in no time. Mother and father Morris, and big brother Jim watched and waited smillingly for them on the edge of the crowd.

"Well, my little man, what is your name?" asked the scarlet-coated and long white-whiskered Santa Claps in a tired, busky voice when Bobbie's turn finally came.

"I'm Robbie Wallace, dear Mr. Santa the boy chirruped at him, round-eyed and devently believing in the identity of Santa, "My mamma's name is Julia Wallace and I've got a little baby sister now, too,"

A Gift From Santa

to keep my poor old grandma Morris. who's got white hair now, from worrying and crying any more over her boy Dan. You see, Mister Santa, my uncle Dan ran away from home a and my grandma keeps saying she can't rest until she sees him again. She's visiting my papa and mamma at home now, and I saw a present she has all wrapped up and labeled for uncle Dan if you'll be good enough to find him and bring him out to our house tonight. Won't you do that. please, mister Santa?"

With a choking cry the whitewhiskered one stumbled to his feet. nearly unsetting his little snow house and searching Bobbie's wonder round ed eyes in hungry disbellef

"You are Julia Morris' little boy?" he muttered dazedly. "And you say that . . . that your grandmother really wants her worthless runaway Dan to to her? is waiting here . Hy for him now? Oh, my

"Aw!" wailed Bobbie, facing his first childish disillusionment, "he isn't a real Santa after all!"

Back through the amuzed and rather indignant crowd of shoppers old mother Morris was coming as fast as her trembling legs would permit. and above the noise and calls of her thrilling, quavering outery; "Danny! Oh, Danny! Danny! I've found my lost boy at last!"

When God's Revelations Come. It was while they were watching their flocks-the common duty of their common days-that the word of clerks at the counters, could be heard | Christ's coming was brought to the shepherds. It is when we are faithfully busy with common duties that God's revelations usually come to us.

Merry Christmas to You and to Jours

By DE LIBLE FERREN CASS

A Few Don'ts for Christmas

Don't court indigestion. Don't grumble, whatever you do. Don't half fill the kiddles' stockings. Don't give presents which will be

Don't forget the mistletoe. Romance still lives. Don't forget that it ought to be a merry Christmas.

Don't deny the little ones' ideas about Santa Chus. Don't worry about unpaid bills-at any rate until tomorrow Don't scoff at the lingering super stitions of the good old days. Don't for the show of things, buy presents which you can't afford. Don't expect too many presents.

Take what you get and be thankful. Don't, if you get up on your wrong side, make everybody else miserable. Don't forget to think at least once during the day what Christmas really menns.

Don't give a present unless you want to. Better not give at all than give insincerely. Don't forget that the giving of Christmas boxes, like charity, should begin at home. Don't, if you are a girl, stand under the mistletoe until you see the right chap approaching. Don't kiss somebody else's best girl. even though she is under the mistletoe. There might be a row. Don't work on Christmas day if you can avoid it. If you have to, however. don't make a song about it.

Don't give Johnnie a trumpet and Peter a whistle and expect to have a quiet time. It's unreasonable.

Don't put off buying presents until the last minute. You'll get better value and avoid the crush if you shop early. Don't send an electric runabout to a freezing widow with five starving children. This is like throwing a rope of pearls to a drowning man.

Don't look pained when somebody tells a fifty-year-old Christmas story That's one of the unavoidable circumstances of the festive season. Don't give a new song to some one who doesn't sing; but be still more certain that you don't give a new song to some one who imagines he can sing. Don't refrain from giving because you can't afford to give much. The intrinsic value of a gift counts for nothing. It is the thought which prompts It that matters.

Don't let the wife give you a Christmas present in the form of cigars. If she persists in doing so, don't smoke them-give them away again, without letting her know about it, of course.

Christmas Means Love

We cannot picture it without seeing the spangled Christmas tree girt with the faces of gleeful youngsters, glad parents, and happy bodies returned home from town or far metropolis It sounds like bells and crackling logs and shouts of children. And even our old, round-shouldered. sorrow-ridden planet, with his eye knocked out on his cheek, pauses to smile from sea to sea, and love is everywhere rejuve. nated.
